The role and conduct of a Parent Governor

Parent Governors provide a vital “parental viewpoint” to the Academy Standards Committee (ASC), but it's important to remember that a Parent Governor is not a representative for parents at the school, or to be used as mechanism to address any personal concerns.

It's really important that the ASC has a range of perspectives and views which is why Parent Governors and Staff Governors are appointed, alongside Governors who are from the community, and also have a range of skills and expertise to effectively provide the support and challenge. Although elected by fellow parents or staff members, neither Parent Governors nor Staff Governors are to be a spokesperson for particular views of parents or staff. Keep the parental perspective in mind and approach all matters with the question ‘What do I think as parent about this, and what may other parents think?’

A Parent Governor should work in partnership with other Governors and the senior leadership team to look at the priorities for the school and work together to raise standards and improve outcomes for all children. Every Governor has a responsibility to hold the Headteacher to account, and ask robust and challenging questions, but these must be appropriate and objective, and meetings should not be used to raise issues effecting a Governor's own child as there are policies and procedures in place for those issues to be addressed.

The role of Parent Governor can be a very rewarding one, and there are plenty of opportunities to learn new skills and work closely with a wide range of people. The experience is also good for your CV. There are however, certain formalities and duties which are required to be adhered to including this Code of Conduct, and training and development can be offered to support you in your role.

The Seven Principles of Public Life

(Originally published by the Nolan Committee: The Committee on Standards in Public Life was established by the then Prime Minister in October 1994, under the Chairmanship of Lord Nolan, to consider standards of conduct in various areas of public life, and to make recommendations).

Selflessness - Holders of public office should act solely in terms of the public interest.

Integrity - Holders of public office must avoid placing themselves under any obligation to people or organisations that might try inappropriately to influence them in their work. They should not act or take decisions in order to gain financial or other material benefits for themselves, their family, or their friends. They must declare and resolve any interests and relationships.

Objectivity - Holders of public office must act and take decisions impartially, fairly and on merit, using the best evidence and without discrimination or bias.

Accountability - Holders of public office are accountable to the public for their decisions and actions and must submit themselves to the scrutiny which is necessary to ensure this.

Openness - Holders of public office should act and take decisions in an open and transparent manner. Information should not be withheld from the public unless there are clear and lawful reasons for so doing.

Honesty - Holders of public office should be truthful, and have a duty to declare any private interests relating to their public duties and to take steps to resolve any conflicts arising in a way that protects the public interest.

Leadership - Holders of public office should exhibit these principles in their own behaviour. They should actively promote and robustly support the principles and be willing to challenge poor behaviour wherever it occurs.
